Introduction

The Dawood Research Institute (DRI) is a non-profit research organization registered in Nigeria. DRI conducts its research activities in Nigeria in collaboration with local and international partners. Its main activities are social and academic research and most of these have been in the area of philanthropic studies, interfaith relations, social justice and offering consultancy services. DRI also organizes conferences and workshops aimed at making lasting impact in Nigerian society as well as Africa at large. The 1st international conference organized by DRI in April 2023 was on “Contemporary Practice of Zakat in Africa” with funding from the Muslim Philanthropy Initiative, Indiana University, which brought together scholars and practitioners from Nigeria and parts of Africa. The conference was held at the University of Jos, Nigeria. The theme of the 2nd DRI international conference was “Contemporary Practice of Philanthropy and Educational Endowment in Africa” held in February 2024 at the Bayero University Kano in collaboration with Indiana University, USA and six universities in Nigeria. The conference was funded by the Ford Foundation, Habibiyya Islamic Society, and Ammasco International Ltd, Nigeria.

The theme for DRI's 3rd international conference is “Contemporary Practices of Philanthropy in Africa: Prospects and Challenges.” This is meant as a follow-up on development in the area of philanthropy and to draw scholarly attention to this emerging area of study in Africa. Our hope is that this conference will attract wider attention from Nigeria, other countries within Africa and different parts of the world.

Conference Location: Faculty of Arts, University of Abuja, FCT Abuja, Nigeria.

Abuja, the Federal Capital Territory (FCT) is chosen for this conference because of its strategic position in Nigeria and easy accessibility for both local and international participants.

Collaborations:

Apart from the Muslim Philanthropy Initiative, Lilly Family School of Philanthropy, Indiana University, USA, University of Abuja, and the University of Jos, we are currently discussing collaboration with different partners.

3. To showcase innovative philanthropic practices and models in Africa.
4. To create and facilitate an interactive platform that will bring together practitioners and researchers in Africa.
5. To promote the study of philanthropy in Africa.

Overview of the Conference Theme

Philanthropic practices have grown from strength to strength in Africa, which generates a lot of scholarly interest as well as entice the attention of local and international foundations, NGOs, and community initiatives. This has gradually progressed over the last two decades. The recent boost in philanthropic activities in Africa came as a result of the COVID-19 pandemic lockdown (2020-2022); foundations, NGOs and particularly individual philanthropists became visible on social media.

This advanced philanthropic practices and activities to another level that have become effective in reducing the agony of people in need. Today, the scene of philanthropy is witnessing diverse interest groups; wealthy individuals, practitioners, foundations and NGOs affiliated to both local and international donor agencies, faith-based and community initiatives, etc. Sub-Saharan Africa is home to numerous complex issues ranging from poverty to health and malnutrition, from inadequate education to lack of sufficient social welfare and limited social justice, as some prominent examples. Therefore, billions of dollars in foreign aid enters Africa annually, which is directed towards humanitarian purposes to alleviate suffering and improve the economic wellbeing and standard of livelihood of those people in need. Local effort is exerted to assist a cross section of vulnerable members of society. This is achieved by those motivated from different primary perspectives: religious and social (humanitarian).

As donors make desperate efforts from various convictions to assist and improve the quality of life of the indigent, diverse practitioners also provide their own contributions by disseminating and channeling funding into different aspects of need. It is assumed that local philanthropists and some organizations, as well as community initiatives, are often closer to the people and that therefore, they are more aware of people's needs. The rise of charitable activities of local philanthropists reflects the fact that they are individually and collectively realizing the importance of giving back to their communities towards the social wellbeing of the society they live in, addressing critical issues such as education, healthcare, daily feeding and shelter. Professionals are scattered in different local and international organizations, some in paid employment while others are providing services on voluntary basis. Apart from these initiatives, scholarly interest is gradually evolving around philanthropy in Africa. The responsibility of scholars is to analyze these philanthropic endeavors and to provide recommendations for the rest of the world to better understand these processes, developments and shortcomings in Africa and to respond with enhanced interventions and superior strategies in the deployment and allocation of resources. Research can also help professionals, foundations and NGOs to understand areas that require more attention.

Therefore, the Dawood Research Institute (DRI), its local and international partners are creating a forum to the facilitation of cutting-edge research, symposiums and a series of international conferences on the different developments pertaining to the current philanthropic landscape in Africa. DRI's publications are also avenues that encourage discourse on philanthropic activities/practices in Africa. This conference will bring together scholars from different universities and institutions in Africa and beyond, professionals and individual philanthropists as well as foundations and NGOs to share their research, experiences and recommendations.

Under the theme of the conference: “Contemporary Practices of Philanthropy in Africa: Prospects and Challenges”, participants are expected to look at philanthropy from a broader perspective considering models of excellent in diverse African societies.
